"I, the undersigned, state that I will accept full responsibility for the above declaration, having been advised that any falsification of this declaration will result in the event that this offense is discovered, in my immediate expulsion from the school and the penalties prescribed for falsification of public documents."

- 4. The date for the delivery of students food tickets for the last quarter of the year was 1 October, but the tickets were actually given out on 9 October, after all students had paid their taxes.
- 5. A shortage of paper exists at the Faculty of Philology. At the beginning of the school year the Union of Working Youth (UTM) made available five notebooks per student at a cost of 98 lef. These five notebooks must suffice for the entire first semester. In all courses on ideology students are compelled to take notes under threat of punishment. For a single lesson in Marxism eighteen to twenty pages of notes are demanded.
- 6. Students are compelled to attend classes regularly; special emphasis is placed on attendance at classes in Marxiam. Those who are compelled to work for a living have been forbidden to enter the Faculty of Philology.
- 7. The first general course in philology ever offered is being given by the dean, Professor Iorgu Iordan, former Rumanian Ambassador to Moscow. The subject is "Comrade Stalin's articles on linguistics."
